The Curriculum Council is developing 12 VET industry specific courses, where a whole training qualification is delivered and assessed according to industry standards, with additional workplace learning required and an optional exam.

To meet VET course requirements and achieve all the course unit credit attached to a qualification, students must follow the course structure, attain the required units of competency and fulfil the work placement requirement.

The first four courses have been developed in consultation with teachers delivering related qualifications, TAFE lecturers and industry representatives. They are now ready for wider consultation.

The four courses are:

- Automotive (VET industry specific)
- Business Services (VET industry specific)
- Construction (VET industry specific)
- Information Technology (VET industry specific)

The Council seeks feedback on these courses.

The draft courses and survey questions can be found under the course names on the Council website at http://www.curriculum.wa.edu.au/internet/Senior_Secondary/Courses/.

The consultation period for these four VET industry specific courses will finish on 13 June 2008.
